In addition to walking to remember your child(ren), you can honor them with a luminaria. The luminarias will be placed along the walking path. You can also honor and thank those that have walked with you through your grief journey. Family and friends can purchase a luminaria in memory of the child you lost or to honor those who are grieving the loss of their child.

Each luminaria will include the honoree’s name as well as the person who dedicated the luminaria. Those who attend the walk are welcome to take all of your luminarias home with you. Later in the month, you can use the luminaria to light up the night during the international Wave of Light. October 15th is designated as one special night for parents, family, and friends to honor the babies no longer with us. They ask everyone to place a lit candle in their window at 7pm local time & leave it lit for at least an hour, thereby creating a “Wave of Light” around the world. What a wonderful way to use your luminaria. Click here to visit the October the 15th site to learn more about this night.

Contact UNITE via the website to dedicate a luminaria. Luminaria can be purchased for a $10 donation. Go to the UNITE website here. UNITE will send you an acknowledgment via email that you can forward to your honoree to let them know that you have remembered their child or honored their friendship in this special way. Thank you for your support.

If you or your organization would like to sponsor an edition of UNITE Notes, please contact us at 1-888-488-6483 or via email at administrator@unitegriefsupport.org.

Thank you for your support.

Red Flag Days

Soon after the death of your baby you may begin to feel some anxiety and sadness in anticipation of special dates that loom in the future. One date that is very difficult for parents is the baby’s due date, which is the date your baby was expected to be born. When a baby is born pre-term, then the due date will be full of disappointment for what should have been a joyful day. The first due date after your loss is the most difficult, so it is wise to plan an activity to honor the baby that was expected to come into this world on that date. Some parents choose to go to the shore or another vacation spot to find peace and solitude, while others may want to distract themselves from their sadness by doing something fun. It is up to you to do what comforts you the most.

Babies that are born at the cusp of viability (approximately 24 weeks), or those that have life limiting anomalies may only live for a few hours or days. Their date of death may be days or weeks after their birth date. In this case, you will have a separate birth date and death date. If you learn of your baby’s death at a routine prenatal appointment when the doctor cannot find a heartbeat, you may not be certain of the exact date that your baby died. In this case, the date that the baby is born is considered to be his/her birth date, and no death date is noted. Some parents refer to this date as the “angelversary” of their baby – the day their baby became an angel.

Every birthday marks one more year that you are living without your baby. Each year marks a milestone in which your hopes and dreams for your child are unfulfilled. Seeing other children who are the same age that your child would have been can be very hurtful. Parents have shared with me some helpful ways in which they honor these special dates. Doing something peaceful as a couple or family, such as going to the beach or a park is a way to respectfully remember your baby. To celebrate their baby’s birthday, parents sometimes like to make a cake and share it with family members who support them in their grief. If there is a cemetery in which the baby is buried, bringing balloons, small toys, or cupcakes to the grave can be healing. Another idea is to create a memorial garden at your home and decorate it in a special way on that date. One of the moms in my support group bakes cupcakes and puts them in her memorial garden. She doesn’t even seem to mind when the squirrels eat them! Parents may even feel sad on their own birthdays because their child is not with them to celebrate.

Mother’s Day and Father’s Day are two of the hardest days. It’s difficult to wrap your head around the fact that you are still a parent, but your baby is in Heaven. On these holidays that celebrate parenthood, your arms are empty and it is especially painful. You are the parent of an Angel Baby.

Holidays such as Christmas and Thanksgiving always cause a lot of anticipatory grief, which can begin months before the holidays occur. While your family and friends are occupied with holiday festivities, your baby seems to be forgotten, causing even more grief for you. There are many ways that you can honor your baby during these times, such as lighting a Red Flag Days (cont.)
candle or hanging a special ornament on your tree in their memory.

I’ve just mentioned the most common special days that will bring a grief reaction. However, until recently I did not know that parents had grief reactions to days that never occurred to me! One mother shared with me that her husband was crushed by the prospect of spending Superbowl Sunday without his baby. In his mind, his baby would be born in December and he was looking forward to sitting in front of the TV with his new baby on his lap, while watching the football game. His expectation of sharing that day with his new son was shattered. This is not a typical day that I would expect a parent to feel the pain of the loss, but it was for this particular dad. This revelation taught me a big lesson!

I began to imagine specific occasions that are part of the hopes and dreams of parents that begin as soon as you learn that you are pregnant. Think of all the visions that you have of being a parent. There may be hundreds of dreams that are dashed when a baby dies, and those dreams are as individual as you are. I’d like to share an example with you.

Moms and dads imagine what fun it will be to bring their baby to family gatherings, only to feel like a failure when all of their siblings have children, and they don’t. Family gatherings are now events to be dreaded. There are many big things and little things that you dream of doing with your child that are crushed when you have a loss. I’ve come to realize that it is not only the Hallmark holidays that are difficult.

Parents often tell me that the anticipation of the day is usually worse than the day itself. Nevertheless, it is important to recognize that even everyday events can tug at your heart strings if you had your heart set on enjoying them with your baby. It is important to recognize that the painful feelings surrounding these special dates are a normal and a healthy part of your grief journey. It hurts so much because you love your baby so much!

October is Pregnancy Loss Awareness Month

In 1988, President Ronald Reagan recognized the significant impact the loss of a baby can have on parents, friends and family. In a time when loss of a baby was not talked about, he stepped up to proclaim the month of October as Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month. This public recognition started the conversation. How will you honor your baby? Would you like to share your thoughts or photos with others via our newsletter? If you would like to submit stories and/or photos, please click here. Your submission will be published in a future newsletter which can be accessed online by anyone seeking support as they grieve the loss of their baby.

Proclamation 5890 -- Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month, 1988
October 25, 1988

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Each year, approximately a million pregnancies in the United States end in miscarriage, stillbirth, or the death of the newborn child. National observance of Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month, 1988, offers us the opportunity to increase our understanding of the great tragedy involved in the deaths of unborn and newborn babies. It also enables us to consider how, as individuals and communities, we can meet the needs of bereaved parents and family members and work to prevent causes of these problems.

Health care professionals recognize that trends of recent years, such as smaller family size and the postponement of childbearing, adds another dimension of poignance to the grief of parents who have lost infants. More than 700 local, national, and international support groups are supplying programs and strategies designed to help parents cope with their loss. Parents who have suffered their own losses, health care professionals, and specially trained hospital staff members are helping newly bereaved parents deal constructively with loss.

Compassionate Americans are also assisting women who suffer bereavement, guilt, and emotional and physical trauma that accompany post-abortion syndrome. We can and must do a much better job of encouraging adoption as an alternative to abortion; of helping the single parents who wish to raise their babies; and of offering friendship and temporal support to the courageous women and girls who give their children the gifts of life and loving adoptive parents. We can be truly grateful for the devotion and concern provided by all of these citizens, and we should offer them our cooperation and support as well.

The Congress, by Senate Joint Resolution 314, has designated the month of October 1988 as "Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month" and authorized and requested the President to issue a proclamation in observance of this month.

Now, Therefore, I, Ronald Reagan, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim the month of October 1988 as Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month. I call upon the people of the United States to observe this month with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and eighty-eight, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and thirteenth.

Ronald Reagan

For My angel Clancy Rieser
By Jenny Gibson Rieser
Carried for 10 weeks
May 28, 2018 day he spread his wings

I saw you in my mind.
I held you in my heart, my body, my soul.
If only for a short while, you are loved my dear child.
And you were ours.

I was picked to be your mother, to nurture you a short while
But I’ve come to know, you were meant to be held in God’s arms.
I wasn’t ready for the sadness, the sheer pain of losing you.
I wasn’t ready to let go so soon.
I wasn’t ready for your wings to fly.

But I have come to realize that being an angel mother requires a lot of strength.
It calls for power from within, an understanding of the unknown and faith in a bigger plan.
Fairness seems incomprehensible to an angel mother. Your search for reason only to be lost in the winds.

You cry, you yell. You grieve.
You cry again.

They say time heal all wounds, but this will stay with you, engraved in your mind, your heart.
This is the new you.

I will remember this child, this angel, this life.
I will carry you in my heart.

I will look for you in the everyday miracles of life.
I will talk to you and I will honor you.
And I will always love you, my darling.
Hello, this is Jen Anderson, the owner of Once Upon a Time Creation. Thank you for the opportunity to partner with UNITE and share a little about the service we provide. I understand how important UNITE’s mission is because I lost my third child, Margaret, late in my pregnancy. The time after her loss was very difficult for our family and I wish I had known about this organization back then.

At Once Upon a Time Creation, we transform sentimental clothing into beautiful, lasting keepsakes. Our mission is to help you honor and celebrate your loved ones and memories in a new way. Everyone saves clothes for a reason, they hold special memories. They are not meant to be stuck in storage. They are meant to be loved and enjoyed every day in a meaningful way.

One of the keepsakes we create is to turn a receiving blanket into a memory bear. I just learned that for families that have lost a child, the receiving blanket may be the only physical connection they have to their child. Knowing this leaves me speechless and heartbroken for every one of those families. So the Receiving Blanket Bear is where our paths cross and the perfect way for us to help the organization.

Once Upon a Time Creation plans to make a donation to UNITE for every Receiving Blanket Bear ordered. Our hope is that we can help UNITE guide families to find a bit of peace through the pain.

When it comes to creating special keepsake gifts, the possibilities are endless. We love the whole process...getting to know you, designing each piece, and sharing your memories. To learn more about Once Upon a Time Creation, please visit www.onceuponatimecreation.com.
